“Newborn babies can recognize their mother’s smell and voice.”

-Desmond Morris, Social Biologist

How important is physical bonding with your baby?

Babies immediately form a bond with their mothers, as research shows they can recognize their mother's voice and scent within a few days of being born.

These physical and emotional connections encourage babies' behavioral, emotional and social growth. That is why The Children's Movement has put parent skill-building - and expanding the 24-hour parent resource, Help Me Grow - at the center of its 2017 legislative agenda.
