“11% of children have been diagnosed with ADHD in the United States.”

-Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) is a mental condition that often begins in childhood and can continue into adulthood.

The most common symptoms typically first appear between the ages of 3 and 6, and include difficulty concentrating, paying attention and impulsivity. The behavioral disorder often contributes to feelings of low self-esteem and anxiety.

One in five American children who have been diagnosed with ADHD are not being treated for their disorder. Children who do not receive proper treatment have more difficulty succeeding in life, which is why The Children's Movement of Florida is committed to expanding special needs services, such as Early Steps and Child Find, that help screen and treat all children.
