“Babies need to go to the doctor or nurse for a ‘well-baby visit’ six times during their first year.”

-U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

Did you know that going to the doctor when healthy is just as important as when you are sick?

This is especially true for babies. “Well visits” enable the pediatrician to do thorough check-ups to ensure babies are developing and growing properly. The first year is vital to make sure they are on the right track and to catch any potential problems early on.

Unfortunately, more than 250,000 children in Florida are uninsured, making access to a pediatrician difficult.
