“14% of children under the age of 6 co-reside with a grandparent.”

We'd like to wish all the grandparents out there a Happy Grandparents Day! Grandparents play an important role in a child's support system. Studies show that children do best when they have at least three loving and supportive adult influences in their lives. Grandparents are often one of these adults.

According to Pew Research, one in ten children in the U.S. now live with a grandparent, a number that has increased steadily since the Great Recession of 2008. The makeup of the American home is shifting, and this might be a positive change for children and parents.

It can be a great help to have grandparents in the home to care for young children during the day. They are a source of wisdom and an extra set of helping hands when things get hectic. This Grandparents Day, show the grandparents in your life how much their love and support is appreciated.
