“Children who are read to frequently are more likely to read or pretend to read.”

The Children's Movement of Florida

According to the National Education Association, the only way to become a good reader is to practice. Young readers need to practice recognizing letters and sounds. The more children read or are read to, the better readers they become.

Not only does reading unlock an infinite, imaginative world, learning how to read early helps kids succeed. Modeling good reading habits for kids early on is a great way to build the tools they need. Read with children daily and prompt them to sound out words and sentences. When they are old enough, set aside solo reading time and dive into a book of your own at the same time.
